way be a fine advertisement for the fair. The men in charge of the fair intend to make it creditable in every way.

"Thornton's panorama of the volcano, which was shown at the Chicago World's fair, and which was sold for $100,000, will be exhibited in a special building on the Hawaiian part of the Midway. This will be larger than the structure on the Chicago Midway. You see, the men who bought the panorama found that they had secured a good luck and a white elephant at the same time and they want to get back a part of their money. They will introduce electrical effects in connection with the panorama, which will make it well worth the white viewing.

"While in St. Louis, I met Ben Walpole and his club of Hawaiian singers, who are now finishing a four-months engagement in the Continent. A cafe and play house combined. The boys are doing very well indeed but like all who have breathed the air of Hawaii, they are homesick and anxious to get back to their native land. Ben Walpole is a fine fellow and manages the boys most successfully, holding down those who might show a tendency to break loose once in a while and showing them the advantage of business before pleasure.

"Unless their plans are changed, the young Hawaiian singers will go to Omaha to play on the Orpheum circuit after their have completed their St. Louis engagement. They expect to return home in December.

"The club is made up of the following: Ben Walpole, manager; Billy Sea, musical director; Antonio Zabian, tenor; "Judy" Parker, baritone; Robert Nawahine, bass; J. Bone, flute; J. Foukalani, J. Mahoe, Wm. Alohiwa and J. Kumalea.

"While in St. Louis the boys invited me to their rooms but I got there too late to witness a scene, which, when they told me about it, made me think of hurrying my stay to a close and returning home.

"It seems that Ben and the others went down to the fishmarket the day they invited me up and much to their astonishment, discovered a number of kumoi, which had come all the way from New Orleans. They bought every one they could lay hands on, returned to their rooms. They waited for me until they thought I was not coming and then, with bread as a substitute, sat down to the most satisfying meal they had had since leaving Hawaii's shores.

"I went to St. Louis for the express purpose of attending the sessions of the Supreme Lodge of the K. of P. of N. and S. A., etc., as the delegate from the lodges in the islands. It was a grand affair and one that I shall not soon forget.

"One whole week was taken up with the sessions, which were held in St. Paul's church, and for two days as a special honor to Hawaii, I had the great satisfaction and pleasure of sitting in the chair of Vice Supreme Chancellor. There were 129 delegates present, representing every state and Territory in the Union.

"The dress parade and inspection drill at Camp Jackson was one of the grandest things of the kind I have ever been my pleasure to witness. The Knights were headed by a platoon of mounted police and the Eighth Regiment band of the Illinois National Guard. There were one thousand knights in companies and regiments. This is what one of the papers says of the parade: "Not once were the ranks broken, though it was apparent that the strain told on the little, short-legged fellows, but no one lagged. No man could lag behind such made. Prancing horses with flashing military trappings, a thousand cornucopia swords dazzling the eye with their brightness, the roll of drums, the blare of horns, hoarse shouts of command and the tramp of a thousand feet, told St. Louis that the Pythians were upon them."

"I went through the alumni of St. Louis in company with Hon. S. A. T. Watkins, assistant prosecuting attorney of Chicago. We were conducted through this dangerous quarter by one of the best detectives on the force through the courtesy of the chief of police. I was greatly impressed with the splendid system of policing this dangerous district. If anything of a criminal nature takes place there, the whole section is suddenly under police control and a rapid search for the perpetrator or perpetrators is made. It is not often that the officers have to report failure.

"Among other places, I went to Cincinnati and Chicago, visiting the most interesting places through the courtesy of friends I met there. Taken all in all, I had a most delightful time.

Henry E. Cooper, Superintendent of Public Works, was seen this afternoon with reference to the location of a building for Hawaii and he stated that when O. G. Traphagen, the architect, was in St. Louis, he succeeded in securing the finest kind of a location right among the buildings of the States and Territories and close to the site pointed out by Mr. Coelho as being the most favorable on the grounds.

MAYOR HARRISON'S SUPERSTITIONS. Carter H. Harrison, mayor of Chicago, is just a little bit superstitious. A friend of his, just now a guest at the Holland House in this city, says the New York Commercial, quotes the mayor as telling him in confidence one day:

"When I get to bed my shoes must have their toes pointed toward the door of the bedroom. Whenever I think of it the toes are pointed that way. I don't remember just what bad luck will attend carelessness in placing the shoes sideways or backward or in throwing them in a heap. Maybe it means that a man who can fix his shoes carefully that way all the time will be sober all the time.

"If I have to go back into the house for anything which I had forgotten when I left home, I always want to take off my overcoat, if it be in Winter-time, and my hat, sit down in a chair, cross my legs and do something connected with household affairs. Then you can leave the house again without any bad luck following. Then I never like to sit down at a table with twelve others. I don't mean to say that any of these things is of great importance or that I fear to break one of the rules, but they are survivals of boyhood which have some weight—rules which I follow instinctively sometimes."

Many a man has worn corns on his hands throwing bouquets at himself.

To be a successful dentist you must have a little pull.

TALL AS A LONDON PEELER.

For clergymen are so well known in London as the venerable Archdeacon Sinclair. This fact is, in part at least, due to his striking appearance, as he stands considerably over six feet in height and is broad in proportion, while he carries himself in a way which made a city policeman remark when he first went to live at St. Paul's "He ought to be one of us."

His inches, like his leaning toward the church, may be said to have come to him through heredity, for his father, William Sinclair, was the fifth son of the Right Hon. Sir John Sinclair, author of the "Statistical Account of Scotland," and was one of fifteen children, the youngest of whom was six feet in height, while the tallest reached the exceptional measurement of six feet seven inches.

When George III., on one occasion, was at Holyrood, Sir John presented his six girls to the King as "thirty-six feet of daughters," with the approving satisfaction of "Farmer George." The pavement outside his house in Edinburgh was made of very large flagstones from the family property in Gairness, and was, as Mr. Gladstone told the archdeacon, always spoken of as "The Giant's Causeway."

One day, the tallest of the archdeacon's sons was going down George street, when he was "pursued" by an Irish beggar woman who invoked blessings on her head in the hope of alms. Finding her blandishments in vain, the woman changed her tone and exclaimed: "At least, ye might give me your shoe to make a cradle for my baby!"

In some cities even the best people ride in horse cars.

Half hose is no handicap to a good freeman.
